

Deoxyribonucleic acid (DNA) is a nucleic acid containing the genetic instructions used in the development and functioning of all known living organisms. DNA is a collective interaction of hydrogen; oxygen; nitrogen; carbon and phosphorus essential for life as we know it.

Concise History of Creative Photography - with reference to the arts, is similarly a collective interplay of; photography, fine-arts, cinematography, literature and the performing arts.

The, almost linear, comparative route of exploration and development through which different art disciplines travel, with a cross-pollination of influences, are illustrated and comparisons are made with the emphasis on photography.

In documenting the photography styles and periods the fine arts model was adopted, which has been used by scholars for centuries. However, the inherent nature of an artist is to naturally expand vision and experimentation, this is sometimes done to such an extent that it is almost impossible to cage the artist accurately in a movement, style or genre. As the celebrated photographer W. Eugene Smith commented, “hardening of the categories causes art disease”.
